AMIDST POMP

The Remains of Queen Victoria Were Removed From Portsmouth To London Today.

SERVICES AT WINDSOR

Body To Lie in State Until Monday Afternoon, and Then Be Embalmed at Frogmore.

GREAT JAM OF PEOPLE AT CAPITAL

London, Feb. 2.—With the all pomp befitting such an occasion all that was mortal of the late Queen Victoria was brought from Portsmouth today and borne in a brilliant pageant through London streets. From Paddington station the funeral party proceeded to Windsor, where the funeral services were held. The body is still at Windsor and will lie in state there until Monday afternoon, when they will be removed to the tomb in the royal mausoleum at Frogmore.

There was never such a jam of humanity on the streets of London. The crowd is so thronged that scores have been injured in the crush and others will fare as badly.

Major Bassindale, a veteran officer, fell dead from exhaustion just before the funeral train arrived.

There has been not the least indication of an anarchistic attempt on any of the royalty present. There is the greatest precaution, however, in evidence.

THE BREWERY RUNNING

New York, Feb. 2.—After making five trips across the ocean from England in an effort to get to his home in Tenafly, N. J., Joseph Jones finally reached the much desired destination.

Six months ago a relative of Jones died in England, leaving him $1,200.

He started for London immediately to get his bequest. Being somewhat of a drinking man, and not knowing what would happen if he should get into his life term. He was hurried away from Catlettsburg immediately after his conviction yesterday afternoon as a means to save him from a trial.

The retail trade is experiencing mid-winter dullness, but business is up to normal, everything considered. One prominent retailer reports a 50 per cent increase in his January business over 1900. As a whole the month was very satisfactory to most every line.

MAKING OUR MONEY HONEST.

As the Sun indicated a few days since the house committee on currency has reported favorably the Overstreet bill directing the secretary of the treasury to maintain the parity of the silver dollars by redeeming them in gold on demand. Silver dollars so redeemed are to be paid out again only in exchange for gold. In other words, the Overstreet bill will guarantee the honesty of the silver dollar by putting behind it enough gold to equal the difference between its face and its intrinsic value.

Such a law is needed to secure the country against the danger of repudiation by executive order. As the law now stands, McKinley could, if he desired, seriously impair, if not destroy, the gold standard by ordering current payments made on certain bonds paid in silver. Mr. Bryan, during the recent campaign, refused to deny that, if elected, he would issue such an order. Circumstances may be easily imagined which might induce a president, in order to relieve a supposed necessity, to adopt such a policy. Congress should relieve future presidents of the temptation under which the existing law leaves them.

The Overstreet bill should and will be passed at the present session of Congress. There is now no complaint of a deficient supply of currency. That fact deprives of their only element of plausibility the arguments which the radical silverites are certain to make against the bill. If passed now the bill will have been in operation fully twenty months when the elections of 1902 are held. Then arguments against it will have been fully threshed out and refuted, and its merits will be clearly understood. Its opponents will not be able to deceive the people by representing it as a new and probably dangerous measure. The history of the McKinley tariff bill shows the importance of giving the public time to understand new measures before calling upon to pass judgment on them at the polls. The facts that large bills move slowly and that 150,000 voters require considerable time to form a sound judgment on important legislation must be remembered.

If whiskey drinking ever produced such a chronic epidemic of anarchy and lawlessness as has characterized the conduct of those frenzied bifurcated bands that have seemingly captured Kansas history has failed to make any record of it. If the intrepid females want to get action for their money, however, let them try their iconoclastic tactics in Kentucky! They can find plenty of saloons to smash and there'd be plenty at the smashing.

Minnesota promises sweeping reforms in its marriage laws and may set an example which other states will follow. In the Minnesota legislature a bill has been introduced which throws many restrictions around marriage which, in the opinion of doctors, will do much to weed out disease and crime. The bill provides that marriage shall not be allowed between persons where each one is or has been subject to fits of any kind, insanity or any loathsome disease, and further provides that a certificate of a physician showing applicants are fit to wed shall accompany all applications for a marriage license. This measure places the age limit for women at 45, but no provision is made for men as regards age. The penalty for violation is a fine of $1,000 or five years in the penitentiary, or both. It applies to the persons who marry as well as the clergyman or justice performing the ceremony. The proposed law is a most admirable one.

Mrs. Nation's saloon smashing campaign is bringing down upon Kansas some criticism which will hurt the state's prosperity if it does not effect the people—does not awaken them to a realization of the tendency of such conduct. A sample of this criticism may be cited. It appears in the Philadelphia Times, which says: "Nowhere in the world but in Kansas could we look for the phenomenon of an entire community terrorized by one virago, who goes about smashing property with an axe and lashing officials with her tongue." Smashing windows and furniture, on the other hand, would seem to be within the reach of the most ordinary criminal statutes, and the absolute paralysis of authority, whereby Mrs. Nation is allowed to smash things at her pleasure, hindered only by the corresponding violence of the owners of the property destroyed, must be regarded as characteristic of Kansas civilization. It represents the same spirit that harasses negroes at the stake, and generally indignities in any violence that seems proper to the individual or to a mob of individuals, without regard for the orderly restraints of law." Kansas should stop and think. There is need for reformation.

The city of New Orleans will inaugurate a new feature with her water front in the spring. The public wharves and other property pertaining to her front will be in charge of a commission appointed by the governor, under the act of 1890. Its duties will be those of taking care of the public property and the collection of charges. The charges collected will create a sort of sinking fund for the payment of the running expenses of the public wharves and new wharves which will be erected in time.

PHONY TALKERS.
One of the Phonographs for Political Parties is Popular.

The employment of the phonograph as a mechanical substitute for the tired or baneful candidate is likely to be an interesting feature of the approaching general election. For some years the talking machine has played an important part in the politics of America, where in many instances the candidate has in the retirement of his home contented himself while breathing his political views into the funnel of a phonograph and allowing the public to hear them read on in the hands of a capable agent, and under the control of a popular chairman, the meeting of electors takes place just as if the candidate were present in person, and with certain added advantages which may render the popular candidate will readily appreciate. For the usurper candidate the phonograph as a clockwork expounder of political opinions is an unmissable blessing. The hostile constituency may roar itself hoarse with unfriendly criticism, it may refer to the candidate in every unpublished term imaginable, it may even want to throw antiquated vegetables at him, but the machine, deaf, blind and impervious, will go right along, steadily grinding out its prophecies, oblivious on the way of the wayward offenders, without even causing to say, "Gentlemen, am much touched," when a retired or broken impishly beside the funnel. By a simple contrivance the phonograph may be made to register the feelings of the audience, so that when the meeting is over the records can be sent back to the candidate, who reproduces the proceedings and perhaps gratified that he did not attend in person. Only one English member of parliament has so far addressed his constituents by means of the phonograph. This enterprising gentleman is Frederick John Dorsman, M. P. for Falmouth and Penrhyn.
